

Indiana's telephone privacy law should not be diluted or weakened by federal legislation. The number of sales calls I've received have reduced drastically since adding my name to the list.

I think any federal legislation should provide a minimum and any state legislation can strengthen that stand.

The only way I would change things would be to add political parties and interest groups to the list of people I do not welcome to my home telephone.